CRITICAL SECURITY STUDIES (PSC 7312)
Thursdays, 2:00-4:45
Derby 2078
Prof. Jennifer Mitzen (.1), Derby 2036.
Office hours: Mondays 1-3 and by appointment

COURSE DESCRIPTION

This course introduces students to the subfield of critical security studies (CSS), which means it takes a broadly constructivist and critical perspective to the study of security. Traditionally, International Relations (IR) security studies literature focuses on state security, studying it especially through realist and sometimes (neo)liberal lenses. This course presumes background knowledge of those mainstream security approaches and issues (such as realism and (neo)liberalism, the causes of war, strategy, deterrence, arms control or alliance theory), but it does not deal directly with them. Instead, we ask, what is security? Who or what is being secured and for and by whom? We question whether the state is the appropriate (or only) referent object for security, and particularly draw on analytical models from outside the mainstream. We also ask how to conduct research in critical security studies.

LEARNING OBJECTIVES

1. Recognize various ways in which the ‘critical turn’ is different from mainstream security studies.
2. Outline and criticize critical theories of security, identifying distinct assumptions and claims and comparing and contrasting among them.
3. Understand various ways of empirically examining critical security questions.
4. Apply critical theories of international security to political events and practical dilemmas.
5. Construct persuasive written and oral arguments supported by evidence, orally and in writing, about security issues from a critical perspective.
6. Develop skills in leading and participating in inclusive seminar discussion.

COURSE REQUIREMENTS

Participation. All students are expected to attend each class session (5%) and to come to class prepared to participate actively in class discussion based on a close reading of the assigned articles. Participating actively is as much about listening as it is about talking. We will go over discussion norms in class. (10%)

You also will engage in group seminar leading. I will divide the class into groups of three or four. Each group will be assigned to one session and will work together, in consultation with me, to determine how to present the material. The group will then (in conjunction with me) lead part or all of the seminar. (10%) Your seminar peers will evaluate the seminar and your seminar partners will evaluate your collaboration skills.
Guidelines for structuring the seminar and for leading the discussion of an article, will be available on Carmen, along with rubrics for this assignment and peer evaluation forms.

Writing. The writing requirement has two parts:

- Four 2-3 page “response papers” to weekly readings (40%). These papers are not summaries; students should address a subset of the weeks’ reading, aiming to raise 3-4 interesting questions through critique, comparison, and so on. Response papers are due by 6 pm Tuesday evening. Rubric is included at end of syllabus. Late papers will not be accepted.

- One 4000-5000 word (15-20 pages, inclusive) seminar paper or critical review essay (30%), due at the end of the semester. The topic is open, but must be cleared with me. A one paragraph topic proposal is due week 8, in class. Rubric for paper is included at end of the syllabus.

GRADE SCALE

PARTICIPATION
- Attendance. 5
- Class contributions. 15
- Presentation. 10

WRITING
- Response papers. 4 @ 10 points each 40
- Seminar paper. 30

TOTAL 100
ACADEMIC MISCONDUCT

“It is the responsibility of the Committee on Academic Misconduct to investigate or establish procedures for the investigation of all reported cases of student academic misconduct. The term “academic misconduct” includes all forms of student academic misconduct wherever committed; illustrated by, but not limited to, cases of plagiarism and dishonest practices in connection with examinations. Instructors shall report all instances of alleged academic misconduct to the committee (Faculty Rule 3335-5-487). For additional information, see the Code of Student Conduct http://studentlife.osu.edu/csc/.”

COMMITMENT TO ACCOMMODATE DISABILITIES

Students with disabilities (including mental health, chronic or temporary medical conditions) that have been certified by the Office of Student Life Disability Services will be appropriately accommodated and should inform the instructor as soon as possible of their needs. The Office of Student Life Disability Services is located in 098 Baker Hall, 113 W. 12th Avenue; telephone 614-292-3307, slds@osu.edu; slds.osu.edu
CALENDAR

Note that all readings are required and students are expected to read them prior to class. Most are or will be posted on Carmen/Canvas.

CRITICAL REVIEW ESSAY

A review essay is not just a book review; it’s an attempt to use a given book, books, or set of articles on a common theme/topic, to make a larger, original point about the subject in question. A review essay summarizes the main arguments (briefly!) and critiques its main points (usually by considering additional evidence and by developing arguments of your own). But it also presents your own views, derived from that critique, about what this work means either for the development of the field or for international relations more generally. An effective review essay even of a single book necessarily draws on materials other than the book under review, either to place it in a larger intellectual context or to offer evidence supporting the reviewer’s own views.

Some questions to consider:

1. What is the central question(s) the book (or set of books/articles) addresses?
2. Why is it an important question?
   a. Is there a previous literature on the issue?
   b. Does this work address that debate?
   c. What are its conclusions, relative to others?
3. What is the main argument of the book? What does it tell us about the relations between states and what are its implications for the field of IR?
4. How persuasive is the argument? What are its flaws or limitations? How might it be improved?
5. To a set of books/articles:
   a. How is the topic discussed by each of the authors?
   b. Characterize the debate, i.e., organize the arguments to summarize the current state of knowledge
   c. Can the authors/discussions be organized into distinct schools/perspectives?
   d. What divides or joins the authors?
   e. What concepts/methods are crucial to each perspective/school?
   f. What does each view highlight versus obscure/hide?
   g. What are the strengths and weaknesses of each?
6. What questions are left unanswered? What are the gaps in our knowledge? What might the answers be? How might we go about answering them? Where should the literature go from here? Are there other theories or literatures relevant to this problem (and how)?
RESPONSE PAPER RUBRIC
Response papers are worth 10 points each: 3 points summary and 7 points critique/raising questions.
