SYLLABUS

Course Description and Objectives

This course will focus on such topics as the Arab-Israeli conflict, the systemic, psychological, and political economic dimensions of Middle East politics, intra-Arab politics, forms of governance in the nation-states of the Middle East, secular-religious tensions within and between Middle East states, and the interaction between the politics of the Middle East and international politics, including U.S. foreign policy. There are no formal prerequisites for this course.

Course Requirements:

Students are expected to attend class and participate in class discussions. Each student is also required to complete a midterm, a paper, and a final examination, and to participate in a role playing exercise in a scheduled non-class time or approximately one hour in length. The midterm is scheduled in for February 12, while the final examination will be administered on Monday, March 12 from 9:30 - 11:18 am. The midterm will count for 25 per cent of the course grade, the paper, which is due on February 28 will count for 35 per cent of that grade, the role-playing exercise for 35 per cent, and the final examination will count for the remaining 35 per cent. Excused absences from examinations can only be obtained for medical emergencies. Such emergencies must be documented to the satisfaction of Prof. Sylvan, and Prof. Sylvan or Mr. Stratham must be notified in advance of such an absence. An unexcused absence from an examination will result in a grade of zero for that examination.

Academic Honesty

All of the work you do in this course is expected to be your own. Absolutely no cheating or plagiarism (using someone else's words or ideas without proper citation) will be tolerated. Any cases of cheating or plagiarism will be reported to the university committee on academic misconduct and handled according to university policy.

Disability

Students with disabilities that have been certified by the Office for Disabilities Services will be appropriately accommodated, and should inform the instructor as soon as possible of their needs.

Materials Recommended for Purchase

The books should be available for sale in paperback form at all of the campus area bookstores (University Bookstores, Longs, and Student Book Exchange). Purchasing used copies of either of the books is quite satisfactory.

As the reading list portion of the syllabus below indicates, students are also asked to read some materials that are not in the books listed above. The materials in this packet will be placed on reserve in the Reserve Reading Room of the Undergraduate Library in Sullivant Hall, and will probably also be available at a campus area photocopy establishment.

In addition to reading the materials on the reading list, students are expected to keep abreast of the daily news in the internet versions of the _Jordan Times_ at http://www.accessnewsonline.com/jordan.html and Israel's _Ha’aretz_ at http://www3.haaretz.co.il/NewPage/IsraelMainPage.htm

Paper Assignment:

Each student is required to write one paper in this course. For this paper, students are to begin by choosing one bilateral relationship in the Middle East. This can include any pair of Middle East states, including the Palestinian Authority. The Israeli-Palestinian bilateral relationship is, however, not allowed as a paper topic for this course. Primarily using source materials other than those assigned in this course, students must analyze the systemic, state and national, and individual leadership aspects of that relationship. Examine how the overall relationship between those two states is molded by each of those factors.
Maximum paper length is ten pages. Papers should be typed and double spaced. Exceptions to the typing of papers can be granted only after consultation with Professor Sylvan or Mr. Strathman. All ideas, phrases, and sentences which come from another source must be footnoted, whether they are paraphrased or quoted.

Any student who so desires may submit an outline of his or her paper to either Prof. Sylvan or Mr. Strathman by February 14 at the latest. The outline will not be graded, but comments will be made, and this feedback can serve as a valuable tool to improve your paper. The papers themselves are due in class on
