Why should you study Political Science?

These days, an undergraduate education needs to prepare you not for a single career you will keep for a lifetime, but for a lifetime which might include several different careers. Therefore, when choosing a major, a primary consideration should be to find a subject that not only is interesting and exciting, but that can provide you with a flexible skillset and broad knowledge base that will make you attractive to different kinds of employers.

A degree in Political Science is a wise investment in your long term success. Whatever your career trajectory, at many points you will be called upon to problem-solve. This involves understanding the deeper causes of day-to-day events you read about in the news; being able to relate those causes to the values of your organization or society; and learning to think critically, creatively, and outside the box, so that you can frame problems in ways to get traction on them. You also will need to be able to write well. A highly industrialized, complex society moves on written material and the ability to write cogent, well-reasoned prose is widely rewarded across a range of careers. Finally, you will need to be able to design research and to collect and interpret data, both qualitative and quantitative. All of these are broadly applicable skills, taught in many of our courses. These skills will not merely get you a job tomorrow, but will position you to become the kind of person who excels in your chosen career and rises to the highest level.

Political Science is about the study of government, and in our classes you will study many aspects of governing structures and processes. But on a deeper level, what politics is really about is power. To study Political Science is to study power: what it is, how it works, where it is found, and how you can better channel it to achieve your own goals. From the perspective of a political scientist, power and politics are found everywhere. By studying political science, you will learn how decisions get made that affect your day-to-day life, and how policy gets made in ways that shape the choices available to all.

The Political Science Department offers three distinct major programs and eight minors. We also offer several options to enhance your education, such as pathways toward earning Honors and/or Research Distinction, and we can link you up with opportunities to present, fund, and publish your original research. In addition, we can help you find internships and study abroad opportunities to enhance your academic experience.

The Political Science Department has a strong tradition of scholarship in the four main areas of study that constitute the field of Political Science – American Politics, Comparative Politics, International Relations, and Political Theory – as well as in Political Methodology. Our faculty members are active, often path-breaking, researchers who also are committed teachers, actively engaged in advising undergraduates. Our facilities include state-of-the-art computerized teaching and distance learning classrooms, an experimental lab, and a research and teaching consultation lab for faculty and students.

In short, Political Science at the Ohio State University has a wide range of opportunities. Talk to your advisor about the appropriate mix for you.

I. DEGREE PROGRAMS

The Political Science Department offers three degree options, each with distinct requirements. Students may pursue one or more of the following degrees: (a) Bachelor of Arts in Political Science, (b) Bachelor of Arts in World Politics, or (c) Bachelor of Science in Political Science.

For the two Bachelor of Arts degrees, students must meet the basic course and credit hour requirements set down by the College of Arts and Sciences for the Bachelor of Arts degree. For the Bachelor of Science degree, students must meet the basic course and credit hour requirements set down by the College of Arts and Sciences for the Bachelor of Science degree. Information on BA and BS curricula is available at

Students who matriculated between Autumn Quarter 2008 and Summer Semester 2012 should speak with an advisor about the transition to semesters.

A. Bachelor of Arts in Political Science

The BA in Political Science degree program offers students a wide range of opportunities to study the many dimensions of politics and government, including elections and electoral behavior, legal and judicial politics, foreign policy and war, political economy and development, the political implications of race, gender and ethnicity, and the moral and ethical issues associated with democracy, global justice, and human rights.

Students take at least one course in each of the four main subfields of the discipline: American Politics (the study of political behavior and institutions in the United States), Comparative Politics (the study of non-US political behavior and institutions), International Relations (the study of relationships between states) and Political Theory (the study of the concepts and values that inform political life).

Students also choose an area of specialization in which they take at least four courses. Students may specialize in one of the four traditional subfields of the discipline (American Politics, Comparative Politics, International Relations and Political Theory), or in one of the following thematic specializations: democracy and law; political identities and allegiances; political economy and development; cooperation, conflict and violence; inequality and justice; political leadership and reform; and political analysis.

Prior to declaring this major, a student must have credit for one of the following courses: Political Science 1100, 1165, 1200, 1300, 2150, 2300, or 2400.

Requirements for the undergraduate major in Political Science:

1. An undergraduate major in Political Science consists of a coherent program of courses amounting to a minimum of 33 hours of course work numbered at the 2000 level or higher.
2. (A) At least 24 of the 33 hours of course work must be numbered at the 3000 level or higher. These 24 hours do not include course work taken in other departments that are approved as part of the Political Science major program.
(B) A minimum of 21 credit hours must be earned at The Ohio State University. This limits to 12 hours the course work that can be earned through study at another domestic or foreign institution or through Ohio State-sponsored off-campus programs, and ensures that more than half of a student's major is taken from Ohio State instructors. At least 15 of the 21 Ohio State credit hours must be numbered at the 3000 level or higher.

3. Major programs must include at least one (1) course from each of four subfields in Political Science. The fields are American Politics, Comparative Politics, International Relations, and Political Theory. PS 3780 (Data Literacy and Data Visualization) may be counted toward any one of the fields in satisfying this requirement.
4. Major programs must include a 4-course focus in one area of specialization. An individualized focus may be created in consultation with an advisor or faculty member.
5. A grade of “C-” or better is necessary in order for a course to count as part of a major program. A student must earn a Cumulative Point-Hour Ratio of 2.0 or higher in all courses included on the major.
6. A maximum combined total of 6 credit hours in the major can be included from the following categories: independent study; internships; and relevant research, problems and topics courses.
7. As many as 6 credit hours of the 33 required for the major program may be courses with subject matter related to Political Science in other departments. There is no official list of acceptable courses; students should request prior approval from an advisor in the department before scheduling such courses as part of their major programs.

Specialization Areas and Courses: (consult a department advisor for availability). Other courses can be applied to the major with approval of the department.

B. Bachelor of Arts in World Politics

The BA in World Politics degree program provides an in-depth understanding of political institutions and processes around the world at the national, trans-national and international levels. This major will prepare students to live and work in a globalized environment in which international events influence domestic politics, and vice versa, with increasing intensity.

The major is organized into four areas of specialization: foreign policy and security, political economy and development, political institutions and processes in countries outside the United States, and international political theory. For breadth, students are required to take at least one course in each of these four areas, and to add depth they are required to take at least four courses in one area.

Prior to declaring a major in World Politics, a student must have credit for one of the following courses: Political Science 1165, 1200, or 1300.

Requirements for the undergraduate major in World Politics

1. An undergraduate major in World Politics consists of a coherent program of courses amounting to a minimum of 33 hours of course work numbered at the 2000 level or higher.
2. (A) At least 24 of the 33 hours of course work must be numbered at the 3000 level or higher. These 24 hours do not include course work taken in other departments that are approved as part of the World Politics major program.
(B) A minimum of 21 credit hours must be earned at The Ohio State University. This limits to 12 hours the course work that can be earned through study at another domestic or foreign institution or through Ohio State-sponsored off-campus programs, and ensures that more than half of a student's major is taken from Ohio State instructors. At least 15 of the 21 Ohio State credit hours must be numbered at the 3000 level or higher.

3. Major programs must include at least 4 courses at the 2000 level or higher in one of the 4 specializations, and at least 1 course at the 2000 level or higher in each of the other 3 specializations.
POLITSC 3780 Data Literacy and Data Visualization, POLITSC 4781 Data Analysis in Political Science I, and POLITSC 4782 Data Analysis in Political Science II may be taken as a part of the major, but cannot be counted in one of the substantive course areas.
4. A grade of "C-" or better is necessary in order for a course to count as part of a major program. A student must earn a Cumulative Point-Hour Ratio of 2.0 or higher in all courses included on the major.
5. A maximum combined total of 6 credit hours in the major can be included from the following categories: independent study; internships; and relevant research, problems and topics courses.
6. As many as 6 credit hours of the 33 required for the major program may be courses with subject matter related to World Politics in other departments. There is no official list of acceptable courses; students should request prior approval from an advisor in the department before scheduling such courses as part of their major programs.

NOTE: Some courses are listed under more than one specialization. These courses shall be counted ONLY ONCE toward one of the specializations.

C. Bachelor of Science in Political Science

The BS in Political Science degree program provides rigorous training in social scientific methodology and equips students to study and produce empirical research about social and political phenomena. This major allows students who plan to attend graduate school for advanced study in Political Science or another social science discipline, or who are pursuing a second STEM-related major or minor, to pursue their interest in politics while developing and using of their analytical and technical skills.

The main difference between this program and the existing Political Science BA is the emphasis on methodological training. In the BS program, students are required to take a sequence of three core methodology courses as well as a fourth elective methodology course. Students are also required to take at least one course in three out of the four traditional subfields of Political Science: American Politics, Comparative Politics, International Relations, and Political Theory.

Prior to declaring this major, a student must have credit for one of the following courses: Political Science 1100, 1165, 1200, 1300, 2150, 2300, or 2400.

Requirements for the BS in Political Science:

1. A Bachelor of Science in Political Science consists of a coherent program of courses amounting to a minimum of 33 hours of course work numbered at the 2000 level or higher.
2. (A) At least 24 of the 33 hours of course work must be numbered at the 3000 level or higher. These 24 hours do not include course work taken in other departments that are approved as part of the Political Science major program.
(B) A minimum of 21 credit hours must be earned at The Ohio State University. This limits to 12 hours the course work that can be earned through study at a domestic or foreign institution or through Ohio State-sponsored off-campus programs, and ensures that more than half of a student's major is taken from Ohio State instructors. At least 15 of the 21 Ohio State credit hours must be numbered at the 3000 level or higher.

3. (A) 9 credits must be taken in the required core classes in political methodology: Political Science 3780, 4781, and 4782.
(B) 3 additional credits must be taken in a specialized class in political methodology: Political Science 3549, 4192, or 4553. A graduate or ITV methods course may also be used to satisfy this requirement with instructor consent.
4. Major programs must include at least 1 course from 3 of the 4 fields in Political Science: American Politics, Comparative Politics, International Relations, and Political Theory.
5. A grade of "C-" or better is necessary in order for a course to count as part of a major program. A student must earn a Cumulative Point-Hour Ratio of 2.0 or higher in all courses included on the major.
6. A maximum combined total of 6 credit hours in the major can be included from the following categories: independent study; internships; and relevant research, problems and topics courses. Internship experiences must be distinct to count for more than 1 course.
7. As many as 6 credit hours of the 33 required for the major program may be courses with subject matter related to Political Science in other departments. There is no official list of acceptable courses; students should request prior approval from a political science advisor before scheduling such courses as part of their major programs.

II. MINORS IN POLITICAL SCIENCE

The Political Science Department offers eight distinct minors. Students may choose to minor in Political Science, which is the most flexible and general option; or they may choose a more specialized minor from among seven additional options. Students who pursue a BA or BS in Political Science may not also minor in Political Science. Students who pursue a BA in World Politics may not also minor in World Politics.

Students who began their minor course of study before June 2012 and have not yet completed it should consult with an advisor on the transition to semesters.

A. Political Science

The general Political Science minor accommodates the interests of students from a variety of majors who want to supplement their major with a coherent educational program in Political Science. It consists of 15 credit hours. Students are expected to organize their program to develop a focus on a particular aspect of the political world. Of the 15 credit hours required, a maximum of 6 may be at the 2000 level; the remaining hours must be at the 3000 level or higher. A maximum of three hours of courses graded S/U may be applied to the minor. No more than three hours of transfer credit may apply.

B. Campaigns and Elections

The Campaigns and Elections minor provides students with knowledge and analytical tools necessary to understand the election process and political campaigning in the United States.

Required Course

4160 Public Opinion

Elective Courses (choose 4)

- 3100 American Politics and Policy Making
- 3115 Introduction to the Policy Process
- 3420 Political Theories of Democracy
- 4150 American Political Parties
- 4152 Campaign Politics
- 4164 Political Participation and Voting Behavior

C. Comparative Politics

The Comparative Politics minor provides students with in-depth knowledge of the politics of contemporary nation-states and tools for comparative analysis to prepare them to live and work in an increasingly global environment.

Required Course (choose 1)

- 3220 Politics of the Developing World
- 4200 Politics of Modern Democracies

Elective Courses (choose 4)

- 3220 Politics of the Developing World
- 3596 Nationalism & Ethnicity
- 3910 Identity Politics
- 4200 Politics of Modern Democracies
- 4210 Politics of European Integration
- 4212 From Dictatorship to Democracy in Spain, Portugal, Italy and Greece
- 4214 Northern European Politics

- 4285 Comparative Politics of the Welfare State
- 4597 .02 Political Problems of the Contemporary World
- 4327 Politics in the Middle East
- 4330 Global Governance

D. Judicial Politics

The Judicial Politics minor provides students with foundational knowledge in judicial politics and judicial behavior, from the perspective of the role of law and judicial institutions in the larger political system.

Required Course

- 4130 Law and Politics

Elective Courses (choose 4)

- 2400(H) Introduction to Political Theory
- 3440 Political Theories of Justice
- 4135 American Constitutional Law
- 4136 Civil Rights and Liberties
- 4137 The Politics of Legal Decision Making
- 4138 Women and the Law

E. Legal Foundations of Society

The multidisciplinary minor in Legal Foundations of Society provides students with an exposure to the legal underpinnings of society from a liberal arts perspective. It is not intended as a “pre-law” program, but rather, as a means of providing a foundational understanding of the ways society constructs and uses its legal systems.

Courses counting toward this minor must come from at least three different departments, and students must have at least 9 hours of upper-division course credit. In addition, only three credit hours taken for a student’s major can count toward this minor.

Required Course

Sociol 2309 Introduction to Law and Society

Required Course (choose 1)

III. ENHANCING YOUR DEGREE

The Political Science Department offers two pathways to enhancing the academic side of your degree: honors and research distinction.

A. Honors in Political Science

Students in the Honors Program majoring or minoring in any of our degrees may choose to pursue that degree “With Honors,” which is a designation that appears on the student’s final transcript.

1. As a Political Science major, whether through the BS or one of our BA degree programs, to receive the designation “With Honors,” you must complete the major requirements as outlined above, AS WELL AS the following:
 - a. At least 12 hours of credit must be in Political Science Honors courses at the 3000-level or higher.
 - b. In order to graduate with honors, a student’s cumulative point-hour ratio must be at the minimum set by the Honors Office (currently 3.4); the student’s major point-hour ratio must be a 3.5.
2. Students who minor in one of our eight Political Science minors may choose to pursue the designation of graduating “with Honors” in that minor. Honors minor programs must include the following:
 - a. 15 or more credit hours in 2000 level honors courses, and other Political Science courses at the 3000-level or higher.
 - b. Honors minor programs must include
 - i. at least 12 hours of graded credit in Political Science courses at the 3000 level or higher,

- ii. at least one course in each of two different fields, and
 - iii. at least 6 credit-hours in upper division Political Science honors courses or seminars.
- c. Honors minor programs may include 3 credit-hours in another department, with approval of an honors advisor.
- d. In order to graduate with honors, a student must have an overall GPA of 3.4, and a Political Science GPA of 3.5.

B. Research Distinction

Students majoring in any of our degrees may choose to pursue that degree “with research distinction in political science”, which is a designation that appears on the student’s final transcript.

1. Honors Research Distinction. Honors students may elect to do an Independent Honors Research project leading to the BS or BA “with Honors Research Distinction in Political Science.” Departmental expectations for these students are as follows: an overall GPA of 3.4 is required, the student’s major point-hour ratio must be a 3.5, and students must take a minimum of 4 hours in Political Science 4999H. Additional requirements and procedures are described at <http://aschonors.osu.edu/honors/research-thesis>.

2. Research Distinction. Students who are not honors students may graduate “with Research Distinction in Political Science” by writing a thesis. Departmental expectations for these students are as follows: a minimum GPA of 3.0 is required and students must take at least 4 hours in Political Science 4999. Additional requirements and procedures are described at <http://artsandsciences.osu.edu/academics/current-students/advising-academics/graduation>.

IV. SUPPORTING YOUR RESEARCH

We encourage all of our undergraduate students to engage in research, whether by pursuing an independent project or by assisting one of our faculty members with his or her ongoing research. Students who wish to pursue independent research will find that there are many opportunities to fund and present their research, both within the department and across the university. We encourage interested students to talk with an advisor in the department and visit the Undergraduate Research Office (www.undergraduateresearch.osu.edu) to learn more about opportunities for research.

For a list of funding resources, visit polisci.osu.edu/undergraduate/research/funding

V. SUPPLEMENTING YOUR STUDIES

A. Internships

The Department of Political Science encourages students to experience the practical side of their academic endeavors by becoming involved in internships (paid or unpaid) for which they can earn credit toward their BA or BS degree. Because Columbus is the seat of state government and Ohio is consistently a pivotal swing state, many of our students have found exciting local applied learning opportunities at the Ohio Statehouse and with political campaigns and lobby organizations. Students also have pursued internships with local law firms and non-profits for academic credit. And The John Glenn School of Public Affairs sponsors semester-long internships in Washington, D.C., which are popular among our majors. To get a sense of the available options and find what might be a good fit for you, check this link: <https://polisci.osu.edu/undergraduate/internships>. Talk to the Political Science Internship Coordinator about how to earn academic credit.

B. Education Abroad

The Ohio State University offers more than 100 education abroad programs in over 40 countries around the world. Political Science students participate in a range of these programs. Perhaps the most popular are the bilateral exchange programs with Sciences Po in France, the University of Mannheim in Germany and Leiden University in the Netherlands, and the five-week Canadian Parliament Internship Program.

Students planning to receive political science credits from study abroad programs should consult with their political science advisor both prior to departure and immediately upon returning to Columbus. Students should also retain syllabi, exams, papers, etc., for the purpose of helping in the evaluation of course credits.

For more information on education abroad, visit <https://oia.osu.edu/education-abroad.html>.

VI. GETTING INVOLVED

The Political Science Department sponsors several extra-curricular activities that focus particularly on the interests of our majors. These student groups include:

The Collegiate Council on World Affairs (CCWA)

Mock Trial at Ohio State

The Journal of Politics and International Affairs (JPIA)

The Alexander Hamilton Society

Information on these groups and on additional opportunities to get involved in the University can be found at https://ohiounion.osu.edu/get_involved/student_organization

VII. AFTER GRADUATION

A. Careers

Graduates of the political science program receive a degree from a nationally-ranked department, in a discipline that is well-known for instilling strong critical reasoning, research and writing skills. Recent graduates have pursued advanced degrees at top graduate programs across the nation, and have pursued careers in a variety of fields including law, business, political analysis and consulting, public policy, secondary and higher education, and journalism.

The Career Services Office of the College of Arts and Sciences can help students explore the value of their degree, prepare for the job market, and connect with potential employers. More information on their services can be found at <https://asccareerservices.osu.edu>.

The Buckeye Careers program also offers career development services and hosts several internship and job fairs throughout the year. More information can be found at careers.osu.edu/students/.

B. Law School

Many political science students hope to attend law school and pursue a career related to the law. For information about law school and legal careers, talk with your political science advisor. The pre-law advisors in the College of Arts and Sciences also have materials on law school and the LSAT examination. The primary source for information about the law school application is the Law School Admissions Council, found at www.lsac.org.

C. Graduate School

A political science degree can open the door to graduate study in a number of other fields. For example, in addition to political science, our graduates have earned advanced degrees in education, public policy and management, business administration, journalism, international relations and the health professions.

Because admission to the top graduate programs is highly competitive, you should work closely with your faculty adviser as soon as you begin to consider graduate school. Your best chance for admission will come through a strong and carefully-planned course curriculum, good scores on exams such as the GRE or GMAT, strong reference letters, and appropriate extra-curricular activities. Students who plan to pursue a graduate degree in political science should consult with their faculty advisor(s) and other professors about the course of study that is best suited to the field that they wish to pursue.
